The banquet hath its hour,
Its feverish-hour of mirth and song and wine—
There comes a day for griePso'erwhelming power,
A time for softer tears -but all are thine.

We know when moons shall wane,
When summer birds from far shall cross the sea,
When Autumn's hue shall ting the gliden grain—
But who shall teach us when to look for tare?

Is it when Spring's first gale
Comes forth to whisper where the violets lie?
Is it when roses in our paths grow pale?
They have one season- all are ours to die.

Thou art where billows foam -

Thou art where shill we melts upon the air;
Thou art around us in our peaceful home,
And the world calls us forth—and thou art there.

Beneath the shadow of the clim to test Thou art where for meets for, and trumpeds rend
Theskies, and swords beat down the princely crest.

Leaves have their time to fall, Attd flowers to wither at the north-wind's breath,
And stars t set—but all,
Thou hast all seasons for thine own, oh! death.

Miscellaneous.

QUITE LIKELY .- An old fellow in a neighboring town, who is original in all things, especially excessive egotism and profanity, and wno took part in the lare great rebellion, who was one day blowing in a village tavern to a crowd of admiring listeners, and boasting of his many bloody exploits, when he was interrupted by the question: "I say, old Joe, how many rebs did you kill during the war ?" "How many did I kill, sir? how many did I kill? Weil I don't know zactly how many;

How Much Makes a Man Rich.

"To be rich," said Mr. Marcy, formerly Secretary of State, "requires only a satisfactory condition of the mind. One man may be rich with a hundred dollars, while another in the possession of millions, may think himself poor; and if necessities of life are enjoyed by each, it is evident that the man who is best satisfied with his possessions is the richer."

To illustrate this idea, Mr. Marcy related the following anecdote; "While I was Gov-ernor of the State of New York," said he, "I was called upon one morning, at my office, by a rough specimen of a back-woodsman, who stalked in, and commenced conversation by inquiring "if this was Mr. Marcy?"

"I replied that was my name." "Bill Marcy?" said he. I nodded assent. "Used to live in Southport, didn't ye?" I answered in the affirmative, and began to feel a little curious to know who my visitor was, and what he was driving at. "That's what I told 'em," cried the back-woodsman, bringing his hand down on his thigh with tremendous force; "I told 'em you was the same Bill Marcy who used to live in Southport ; but they wouldn't believe it, and I promised the next time I came to Albany to come and san you, and find out for sartin.

Why, you know me, don't you, Bill?" I didn't exactly like to ignore his acquain tance altogether, but for the life of me I couldn't recollect ever having seen him before; and so I remarked that he had a familiar countenance, but that I was not able to call him by name

"My name is Jack Smith," answered the backwoodsman, "and we used to go to school together, thirty years ago, in the little red school house in old Southport. Well, times have changed since then, and you, have become a great man, and got rich I suppose.'

I shook my head, and was going to contradict that impression, when he broke in:
"Oh! yes you are; I know you are rich; no use denying it You was Comptrollerfor a long time; and the next time we heard of you, you were Governor. You must have a heap of money, and I am glad of it-glad to see you getting along so smart. You was always a smart lad at school, and I knew that you'd come to something." I thanked him for his good wishes and opinion, but told him that political life did not pay so well as he imagined. "I suppose," said I "fortune has smiled upon you since you left Southport ?"

"Oh! yes," said he; I hain't got nothing to complain of. I must say I've got along right smart. You see, shortly after you left Southport, our family moved up into Vermont, and put into the woods, and I reckon our family cut down more trees and cleared more land than any other in the State." And so you have made a good thing of it. How much do you consider yourself worth?" I asked, feeling a little curious to know what he considered a fortune, as he seemed to be so well satisfied with his.

"Well," he replied, "I don't know exactly how much I am worth ; but I think (straight ening bimself up,) if all my debts were paid, I should be worth three hundred dollars clean. cash! He was rich, for he was satisfied.

-Count Kouchelef, an incredibly rich Russian, who made Paris stare five or six years ago, has refused to pay a mantua maker's bill of 5,400f. his wife incurred in Paris recently. His defence was that there was a marriage contract between his wife and himself by which each agreed to pay their respective debts—that he has already paid $400,000 for bagatelles bought by his wife in the last three years-that he had sent her away from Paris to keep her out of temptation, giving her a beautiful home in the south of France, and allowing her $24,000 a year pin money, but that jewellers, mantua-makers and milliners send their touters to her southern home to tempt her into all sorts of extravagance, which exceeded his ability to pay, although he has $600,000 a year income. decided he was not liable for the bill.

"Trust to the sincerity of my words and intentions. I should not, nor will I close the book of my life with a falsehood, I only seek for my tomb a new laurel tree, whose shadow shall cover it in the midst of peace. Let us hasten the hour of our nation's triumph. Confidence in my words and be

ME GIVE US A CALL SO I'HE PLEDGE.

BY THE BARD OF MARBLE HALL: In Baltimore, famed for ladies fair, Lived a beautiful girl with flaxen bair, And bonny blue eyes with liquid light, And roscate lips, a glorious sight.

The youngsters fell in love by dozens. But she a crotchet had got in her head,

Until she loved a handsome youth

Who would grant all her requests in truth, And bind him fully never to break The pledge he had taken for her sake. The young men stood aghast with fear : Some whocked their boots, some pulled their hair; Some said 'twas religion, some said 'twas mooey; But it took them aback and they felt quite funry

Among them there was a fine young man; Says he, "I love her as well as I can, Now all make her the promise, both open and free, And agree to stand by it whatever it be."

The fair one stepped up to his side, And said "Should I now be your bride, You must promise here before us all, To buy your clothes at MARBLE HALL. No other can suit a husband of mine

The coats are so handsome, the pants divine." Says Johnny, a laughing, "You dear dittle elf. If you like them so well, get a pair for yourself."

We ofter unusual inducement in all kind of Clothing and Furnishing Goods, together with a superior line of piece goods for custom work. Boys Clothing a special feature.

THE HOUR OF DEATH.

Day is for mortal care
Eve for glad meetings round the joyous hearth,
Night for the droams of sleep, the voice of prayer—
But all for thee, thou mightiest of the earth.

Youth and the opening rose
May look like things too glorious for decay,
And smile at thee—but hou art not of those
That wait theripened bloom to seize their prey.
